IRISH DESIGN WEEK

Design Week 2008 kicks off on Monday with a week-long schedule of design-focused seminars, talks and features. It comprises nationwide events in centres around the country, including Cork, Belfast, Kilkenny, Carlow, Limerick and Dublin. The programme includes an Irish visit by acclaimed international designer Tom Dixon, who will officially launch proceedings on Monday at the National Gallery of Ireland, Merrion Square, Dublin. There's loads on, so check out the website, but if you can pop into New Works by The Irish Furniture Designers Network, there's an exhibition of new pieces by the 18 members of this young group established to promote Irish product design.
